POLITICAL.

—It is said that Gail Hamilton wrote Blaine's letter of acceptance.
—Tammany leaders say that John Kelly can not organize a movement against Cleveland.

—Poor old Logstreet! He sold out for an office and now he has lost that. —[Louisville Times.]

—The National Democratic Committee in session in New York will very likely elect Senator Tamm to succeed himself.

—Gen Logan had one advantage over Mr. Blaine. The latter had his letter printed at a one-horse job office in Augusta and had to pay for it, while the tail of the ticket, being a Senator, got his work done for nothing at the Government printing office.

—A great deal of stress is being laid upon the vote of working men in the pending campaign. We estimate that they will vote about as other people do. Those who are republicans will vote for Mr. Blaine; those who are democrats will vote for Mr. Cleveland. —[Louisville Times.]

—The republican National Committee has appointed a sub-committee to attend to the collecting of money for campaign purposes and the Government clerks will bleed as usual though application will not be made to them at their desks, but they will be notified to call at headquarters and settle.

—A headline in the Republican this morning informs us that Ben Butler's movements are "making the republicans nervous." If Ben makes the republicans nervous when he moves, he makes the democrats nervous when he keeps quiet, and is a more astonishing phenomenon than Miss Lulu Hurst, the Magnetic Wonder from Georgia. —[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

—We say to Mr. Blaine now that had he been a defender of the rights of naturalized citizens when those citizens were hung into foreign prisons and charged, and the Pilot would support him to day, and a million Americans of the Irish race would vote for him in November. But he did not do it, and his pretensions of fair play and friendship now are sheer humbug. He and his party have a lesson to learn from all this, and so has the democratic party. The advantage of the latter is that it has learned its lesson.

—Lincoln's letter accepting the Presidential nomination in 1860 contained about one hundred words. His second letter of acceptance in 1861 contained less than two hundred words. Grant's letter in 1868 was still shorter. Blaine's letter, in the year of our Lord 1884, is so voluminous that a majority of readers shrink from its perusal. It contains six thousand words. It is a stump speech and not an effective one at that. The Philadelphia Times properly characterizes it as "an appeal for a continuation of high taxes, superfluous revenue, expenditures, uncorrected profligacy, and for a new lease of power to the spoilsman and the public plunderer."

—Gen Logan has written his letter accepting the republican nomination for the Vice Presidency. It is only about one-third the length of Blaine's and on that account will doubtless have many more readers. Of the Courier Journal says: "The platform of his party is the text, and the views of the General dovetail into each plank with the precision of an expert. When the Chicago creed of principles says thumb down, Mr. Logan obeys orders, and so, all in all, the work of the political Simon fits the candidate as neatly as a new glove covers the hand. Criticism of Blaine's acceptance can be reused with propriety in discussing that of Logan."

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

—Dayton, Ohio, had a $75,000 fire Wednesday.

—The President of San Salvador has arrived at Washington.

—The thermometer reached 101 degrees at Des Moines Wednesday.

—Peaches will be abundant in Maryland and Delaware, if no worse else.

—Michael Smith, Michael Murray and Joseph Sowers will be hung at Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 23.

—Thirty-nine horses and mules were burned in the stables of Peck & Bishop, near New Haven, Conn.

—Forty thousand veterans are attending the annual encampment of the grand army of the Republic at Minneapolis.

—The Salvation Army Hall at Berme, Switzerland, was attacked by a mob who completely wrecked the building.

—Col. E. W. Cole has purchased the "Point" on Lookout Mountain and will build a railroad connecting it with Chattanooga.

—It is likely that the Panama Canal will be open for traffic in 1888.

—A $5,000 audience welcomed Christine Nilsson at her first entertainment in Louisville.

—The forest fires in Michigan and Pennsylvania have been quenched by heavy rains.

—The Bennett-Mackey cable has been finished and the first message was forwarded this week.

—A threshing boiler exploded near Litchfield, Ill., and killed two men and seriously injured five others.

—H. P. Robinson & Bro., large bankers of Ocala, Fla., have assigned, with liabilities fixed at $200,000.

—A prairie fire in California destroyed 6,000 acres of wheat and many dwellings, causing a loss of $150,000.

—Wm. Harrison, a blacksmith, of Louisville, has inherited a fortune of $340,000 by the death of an uncle in England.

—Judge Van Brunt has given Receiver Davies permission to sue all persons who borrowed money from Grant & Ward.

—Seven persons were killed and over $150,000 worth of property was destroyed in one county in Dakota, by a wind storm.

—Green's Bank at Jackson, Miss., with which nearly every sheriff in the State did business, has been placed in the hands of a receiver.

—Editor F. D. Spottwood, of the Blue Grass Clipper, was thrown from his road-cart and had his arm dislocated and was severely bruised.

—A terrific wind, rain and hail storm did great damage to crops and other property around Omaha, Neb. Hail-stones were as large as walnuts.

—Thirteen thousand picked troops will guard the railway between St. Petersburg and Warsaw, when the Czar goes to visit the latter place in August.

—A very severe hail storm passed over Cornish, N. H. Small trees were cut down and crops were completely ruined. Hail-stones as large as hen eggs were from two to five feet deep in places.

—Yellow fever is on the increase in Panama. There are 176 cases of dysentery in the city and all the hospitals are crowded. Several deaths have occurred from the former and many from the latter disease.

—The prohibitionists assembled in convention at Pittsburg were called to order by Gideon I. Stewart, chairman of the national committee. The Women's Christian Temperance Union Memorial was unanimously endorsed and a declaration made of a total severance from the two political parties. The opening speech of Gideon Stewart was violent and bitter against both democrats and republicans. The Pennsylvania delegation will present Hon. James Black for the presidential nomination. The temporary chairman was Wm. Daniel, of Maryland. There are 446 delegates present. The permanent chairman is Prof. Samuel Dickey, of Michigan.

EAST BERNHARDT, LAUREL COUNTY.

—Business of every kind lively; all the merchants report trade good.

—Whisky and its effects are gradually disappearing from our town.

—Mr. J. T. Weaver, of London, has opened a first-class hotel at this place.

—There was a little difficulty in town last Sunday evening but fortunately no one was hurt.

—The Woman's Temperance Union is doing a good work here with Mrs. Lulu Field President.

—Thos. S. Haynes is rapidly repairing the property he recently purchased of Champ Mullins.

—The Volcan Coal Company started work last Monday morning with thirty-five hands on their roll.

—The hop given by the young men of this place at the mammoth store of J. B. Tye was the best of the season.

—Rev. J. H. Limerick preached a very interesting sermon here last Sunday and also attended to the baptism of the Misses Andrews, at Hazel Patch Creek, in the evening.

—R. G. Ware paid Livingston a brief visit. Mrs. May Mackey, of Rockcastle, has been visiting Mrs. J. T. Weaver. W. H. Thompson was in town Monday. Mr. J. B. Tye is fast improving from the effect of a dislocated hip.

GEO. O. BARNES IN FRANCE.

After a Long Silence, He is Heard From at Paris.

"PRAISE THE LORD"
26 Avenue de la Grande Armee,
Paris, July, 4th, '84

Dear Interior:
I resume our long interrupted correspondence, on a propitious day (is it not?), and will, before giving any sketches of travel, briefly narrate the circumstances that led to my being in Paris at all on the 4th.

I am writing within a bow-shot of the "Arc de Triomphe," which is in full view from the balcony in front of my sixth-story bedroom, and conveys a lesson of comfort to me just now, as I "allegorize" it for my own particular benefit (that you will understand better when you get to the end of this epistle).

Your readers are posted to the 20th of March and the close of the glorious meeting in Barking Road Tabernacle.

On the night of the 21st we moved our encampment to Carpenter's Road Chapel, Stratford Le Bow, where we labored with Bro. Towner among familiar faces and on well-known ground. For there the LORD had given us favor with the people nearly a year before, and a precious ingathering of souls. We remained eight days there, ministering to large congregations, with unabated blessing. Bro. Cory, our rich Welshman, paid us another visit at Stratford and I soon saw that he was restless and suspicious. Travelling in his train to Broad street, I learned the reason. He had been with Mr. Spurgeon, whose grand work he often helped on with munificent gifts—and the grand man had called me a crank, as Cory candidly confessed. I recognized the title as one not wholly unfamiliar, and seeing how the use of this English edition of it was darkening the Welsh horizon, I wrote a brotherly letter of remonstrance to my mighty kinsman "in the Spirit," the very next morning. I gently reminded him that I had never troubled him after the curt epistle of March '83, in answer to my letter of introduction from Dr. Fulton, that as his utterances had become oracular with many, a word even lightly spoken might do damage he little dreamed of; that as he had refused to help me when I had landed, a perfect stranger a year before, unless he could give a sufficient reason for it, he had no right to hinder my ministry with others who might be disposed to lend a helping hand; and I appealed to his well-known loyalty to the right as to whether it was brotherly or kind to call me a crank, without a personal hearing or acquaintance. I further reminded the great and good man (for he is both, beyond a doubt), that when he started out he had all clerical and newspaperial London against him and ought to have known better what was due to a stranger, who came with a simple purpose to save as many souls and bodies as he could in Britain.

To this Mr. Spurgeon replied promptly that he had done me no wrong, wittingly. If I had "peculiar views" I had the undoubted right to proclaim them; and he had an undoubted right to express his opinion of them, even to the use of the obnoxious "crank," for want of a better word to meet the case. But he wound up by saying in a manly way, that won my Kentucky heart, and made me forget the rest, as if it hadn't been written:

"But if I have done you any wrong, I am sorry for it, and ask your pardon and will do so no more." I do not think he will be ashamed of that sentence, at least, when we both stand in the presence of the Master in a day not far off. But that word "crank" did the business for poor Cory. He never got over it and it broke up the Welsh meeting, as far as his getting me to Cardiff was concerned. After circumstances would have effected the same thing, but the one word of a great man, lightly spoken, so turned him against me that in a letter from him to another, which was shown me, he declared that he could not have me come to Cardiff. I mention this little episode for perchance it may find some lodgment in all our consciences and teach us the need of putting that unruly member, the tongue, in the LORD'S dear keeping.

On the 28th of April we went to Grove Chapel, still in Stratford, where we wrought in the gospel till the 10th of May, with crowded attendance from first to last and on Sunday far beyond the capacity of the building.

We were advertised to begin in what is well-known in London as the Tower Hamlets, on Sunday, May 11. We really began on Monday 12th and worked in what is known as the Great Assembly Hall until June 13th, when we were "silenced," (only temporarily, I hope) as I shall narrate in some detail.

But first let me say a word about the mission in the G. A. Hall. It is in the most populous and needy district in the east of London, on Mile End Road, Whitechapel. Frederick Charrington, Esq., is the recognized head of the blessed movement, though ably seconded by a devoted band of workers, chief among whom is his 1st Lieutenant, Edward H. Kerwin. They are both comparatively young men and Mr. Charrington unmarried. He is notorious for having done a very rare thing—yielded up a large fortune for Christ and conscience. His father was head of the great brewing firm of Charrington & Co., and Frederick was actively employed in the establishment when he determined for the LORD'S sake to turn his back upon the whole thing, cost what it might. It led to disinherence, but on his deathbed the elder Charrington made preparation to his son and left him a handsome income, which, I believe, he uses wholly and faithfully for the LORD. This was the gentleman who invited us to his great hall, seating over 2,000, moved there by the accounts of success in gathering audiences and souls in other places.

On Saturday night, just before retiring, in full expectation of beginning Whitechapel the next day, a telegram came from Mr. C. saying that the meeting was unavoidably postponed and that he would call and explain next day. We were not disturbed about it, but slept well and awaited developments. Monday brought Messrs. Charrington and Kerwin for an interview. I had never before seen either of them. Their statement was that Mr. H. Gratton Guinness had been to them again and again, begging them on no account to allow me to preach in their hall; that I was proclaiming awful, soul-destroying heresy; and that his only solution of the thing, in charity, was that my mind was off its balance. It so happened that Mr. Charrington had just been suffering from the visitation of an evangelist, who had gone crazy, on his hands; and naturally, the thought of another of the same sort turning up, rather startled him. And then such charges, from such a thoroughly respectable source, were not to be "pook-pooked." So he came to see for himself before committing, as was right. In ten minutes he was satisfied and the meeting began that same Monday night. It was by far the best meeting we have had in London. The original 3 week's meeting was lengthened to 5; and would have been indefinitely protracted, but that the old hall had to come down to make way for a new one, under contract. Already its demolition had been postponed a month to let the meeting go on. The Lord gave us a parting "kiss of His life" in this series of services, as if to testify his approval, whatever man might say. Even Mr. Cory, who is one of the trustees of the Tower Hamlets Mission, came up, attracted by accounts of blessings, and gave three evenings of his very busy life to attendance on the services. Here also the faith healing movement, received in such vigor, that over 500 people were publicly anointed in the hall after the soul meetings were over and at the close such a testimony service was held as I never before attended, the great hall being packed and great numbers witnessing to blessing for soul and bodily healing. It was protracted till 10 o'clock Friday night, the 13th; when, there being no more time for oral testimonies, a call was made for those who had received distinct blessing in soul or body during the meeting to rise. The congregation rose almost en masse, 2,000 at least, and such a shout of "Praise the LORD" went up that we can never forget it. Mr. Cory was so carried away that he was anointed for bodily healing in the presence of the thousands present, the last evening he was with us. But the invitation to preach and sing in Cardiff was never renewed. I mention this to give you some idea of the iron grasp the clergy has in this country. Here is a man "fully persuaded" by sight and hearing of the "wonderful works of God," submitting to anointing before a great assembly in proof of his endorsement, and yet so frightened at a charge of "heresy" made by one of the "regulars," to pitch us overboard without even a word of explanation or apology. Indeed his original invitation stands uncancelled, save by the line in the letter to another, which that friend showed me. "Put not your trust in princes," even. Thank God I had not done so, as my letters written long ago testify. The words then penned were almost prophetic.

I did not know until the meeting was over how nobly Mr. Charrington had stood by us. His new hall is in process of erection and he went on with the meeting under almost a threat of the withdrawal of subscriptions to the building fund of £2,000—£10,000—if I were allowed to continue. The LORD will reward this dear man for his firmness at such a crisis. "The work is the LORD'S," I need not stop if I lost ten times £2,000," he bravely said. "God bless him," we say, with every thought of him.

"But tell us about Mr. Guinness," you say. I will, as best I can, "nothing extenuating, nor setting down aught in malice."

I have already mentioned him and his lovely children in a previous letter. He came only once to hear us at Bromley (Bro. Lambourne's) and afterwards once at Grove Chapel. On the first occasion I preached on the "Grace of God"—Titus 2: 11, 12, 13. On the second I think about the "Coming of the LORD." In neither sermon did any of my "peculiarities" crop out. Yet in the 30-page tract, in which he attacked me, afterward, he says: "I heard him at Bromley and Stratford," giving the reader the idea that he had exhaustively listened to two series of services and spoke from what he actually had heard of my preaching. The only other occasion in which he listened to the sound of my voice was the interview shortly to be described.
